

Dr. Michael Loedenthal is a Professor of Research at the University of Cincinnati and serves as the Executive Director of the Prosecution Project (tPP). His research focuses on long-term studies of extremist networks, digital ecosystems, state rhetoric, law, & policing, and the technical assessment of applied security vulnerabilities.

Friday, April 4, 2025

1:15-2:45 PM

MU Student Center Rooms 2206 B&C

Open to the public, Free lunch!

DIGITAL SELF-DEFENSE TRAINING

Peace Studies
University of Missouri

Through utilizing the methodology of Threat Modeling, attendees will be challenged to identify, map, and rank threats, risks, and dangers faced by contemporary organizers, academics, and activists. We will review both preventative digital hygiene practices and operational security basics, including virtual private networks, encryption, identity separation, and secure storage...This training will be particularly useful if you are preparing for publicly-engaged careers—and anyone with any kind of web presence!

